ABSTRACT: No venture capital firms have the same let us-pull-up-stakes-and-head-for-California magnetism as Kleiner Perkins. By the magic of its name, Kleiner Perkins gets to see many of Silicon Valley's most promising companies before they seek funding from rival investors, a golden edge in a market where too much money is chasing too few deals.
KP's name helps attract skilled executives to its ventures in Silicon Valley, where such talent is both desperately scarce and widely thought of as the No. 1 factor in determining whether a company sinks or swims. It figures that America's most famous VC firm would have the industry's only celebrity venture capitalist, John Doerr. According to Kleiner investors, the money is extraordinary. KP's returns regularly rank among the top 5% earned by VC firms. Its recent funds, invested heavily in Internet companies, have been some of the best in its history; returning more than 70% a year.
